A Tasteless Card Game of Social Media Attention Whoring

By Ewen Cluney (©2014)

Graphic Design by Clay Gardner

Playtesters: Michael Bom, Chris Camareno, Grant Chen, Nick Colucci, Jennifer Jennings, Thinh Pham, Elton Sanchez, Aaron Smith, Mike Stevens, Dave Taue, Cat Winslow

Specs

- 3-8 Players
- 30+ Minutes
- Ages 16+ (at least)
- Materials Needed: Decks, Rules, 50-100 Tokens (not included)

Introduction

Social networking is awesome. You can connect with friends past and present. You can play games and share your life. Or, you can be an attention whore and spam dumb links. This game is about trying to accumulate Likes so you can... uh... be someone who gets lots of Likes. Go you.

Printing

I recommend printing the cards that appear after the rules in this PDF on cardstock and then cutting them and putting them into an appropriately sized AMAC box (available from The Container Store or similar). The two types of cards have different labels, but printing on different colors of cardstock can make them a little easier to tell apart.

The Cards

This game has two kinds of cards: Status Cards and Comment Cards. Status Cards represent what the OP is posting, and Comment Cards represent what other people are posting in response. Each card has two (or sometimes three) parts.

- Post Text: This is the part you use. Post Text is larger and in bold. Status Cards have questions or fill in the blank statements. Comment Cards have things that can become answers or things that go in those blanks. When the post text has a description of a person in parentheses, such as “(The player to your right),” fill in that person’s name when you read the card.
- Flavor Text: Below the Post Text is the Flavor Text (which is in italics). Some have useful information about the Post Text, but a lot are just sarcastic comments.
- Special Effect: Some cards have a Special Effect below the Flavor Text, which means they make special things happen when they’re played.

How to Play

Preparing

To start with, shuffle the Status and Comment Card decks (separately). Set the Like tokens in the middle of the table where everyone can reach them. You can use glass beads, pennies, poker chips, etc. You'll want about 50-100 of them. If you don't have anything handy, play the "Hate to Hate" or "i.hate.democracy" variants instead.

Everyone draws a hand of 10 Comment Cards. Pick someone to be the first Original Poster (OP) any way you want.

1. Pick Status Card

The OP draws three Status Cards, picks one, and reads it out to the other players. If the Status Card has a Special Effect, do whatever it says. If it conflicts with another Special Effect that's still in play, the new one supersedes the old one.

2. Pick Comment Cards

Each player—including the OP—picks a Comment Card from their hand to go with the Status Card being played. Wait until everyone's got theirs before you move on.

3. Resolve Special Effects

Go around the table, starting with the player clockwise from the OP, having anyone who has a Special Effect on the Comment Card they're playing speak up and resolve whatever effect it has. You can't change your selected Comment Card even if an effect gives you a card you think is better. New Special Effects that conflict always override old ones.

4. Read Comment Cards

The players go around the table reading off their Comment Cards.

5. Award Likes

Each player picks up one Like token from the pile and gives it to the one player whose comment they liked best. You can't vote for yourself.

6. Check Hand Size

If you have less than 10 Comment Cards, draw more until you have 10. If you have more than 10, discard cards until you're back down to 10 (you can pick which ones to discard). Some Special Effects can change the Hand Size, in which case draw or discard to that number instead.

7. New Round

The person clockwise from the current OP becomes the OP for the next round. Now go back to Step 1.

Ending the Game

You could play for a set amount of time, until you run out of Like tokens, or until someone reaches a certain number of Likes, but chances are you'll end up playing way longer than you expected and stop when you're tired or have something pressing to do. In any case, when you stop playing the winner is whoever has the most Likes.

If you really need a hard rule for when to stop, I recommend going until each player gets to be OP a certain number of times. The first OP should keep the Status Cards they pick each time, and then you stop when they have the number listed below.

of Players	Times Each Player is the OP
7-8	2

Tips and Clarifications

- This is a game to play in order to bullshit with your friends, preferably while drunk. Don't worry too much about winning; random stuff may screw you over anyway.
- There's a bit of a performance element to reading your comments to the other players. You know them better than we do, so think about what will make them laugh.
- When effects clash, whether over funny accents of hand sizes, the new one always supersedes the old one. However if an effect is a one-time thing, it doesn't matter how many there are. If one player plays a Comment Card that says everyone draws 3 cards and another player plays one that says everyone draws 2 cards, everyone's going to be drawing a total of 5 cards.
- If you run out of cards from either deck, it may be time to call it quits, but you can always just reshuffle the discard pile.
- If you run out of tokens and want to keep playing, you can get more tokens somewhere, or start using discarded Comment Cards.
- Other "i.hate.*" games and expansions are fully compatible; simply shuffle the cards together and play as usual.

Variants

Double Hate

Each player plays two separate Status Cards each round. This is good if you have a small number of players.

Eat Hate You Cat

For this variant you will need a supply of small pieces of blank paper. Each player draws a hand of Comment Cards, and passes one to the player to their left. Each player then attempts to draw whatever is described on the Comment Card they receive, and passes that to the player to their left. Each player then takes the drawing they've received and writes a sentence describing it.

Hate to Hate

The OP does not play a Comment Card. All of the other players each pick a Comment Card and place it face-down in front of the OP, who mixes the cards up, and picks one to be a winner. The player who played that Comment Card keeps the round's Status Card as a Point. Ignore any Effects on cards for this variant (or at least any relating to Likes). If you happen to have other card games that play like this variant (you know what I mean), you can mix those cards in.

i.hate.democracy

This works like Hate to Hate, except that instead of the OP picking a winner, everyone votes on a winner. To vote, everyone counts to three and points at the winner. Whoever has the most fingers pointed at them wins the round and a Point.

Reset Button

A player can give up 2 Likes to discard their hand and draw a new one.

Share the Hate

At the end of each round, pick a card from your hand and pass it to the player to your left.
